In the spirit of earnings season, we built a list (in no particular order) of the best people to follow for everything about earnings. If you want to include someone, go to our topic stream #EPSMasters and share their name. Let's go:

1.) @Retail_Guru: As the name suggests, he's a master of retail and consumer good stocks. For more than four years he's been sharing excellent insights and commentary about earnings that range from soft drink companies like Pepsi ($PEP) to huge retailers like Costco ($COST).

2.) @Street_Insider: If a major company reports earnings, you can count on Street Insider to have the details ready. They consistently share how EPS and revenues compare to Wall Street's estimates. They also share press releases and write-ups from their website.

3.) @CBOE: The Chicago Board Options Exchange (CBOE) is the perfect account to follow if you're interested in options. CBOE is especially a must-follow during earnings season. They provide updates on notable option activity around companies that are reporting earnings. This makes for interesting stats to review before and after. Were call options active or puts? They will have this for you.

4.) @harmongreg: Meet Greg Harmon. He's one of the most followed traders on StockTwits. During earnings season, you can find Harmon sharing charts and blog posts with both trade and investment ideas. During earnings season, he will provide some unique trade set-ups including potential option trades. If you're looking to follow a real-time trader, Harmon is for you. Press follow.

5.) @TraceyRyniec: It's always excellent to see portfolio managers on StockTwits. Ryniec works for Zacks Investment Research and regularly posts price and EPS surprise charts. They show how a stock has traded vs. its earnings over any given timeframe. Here's an example. In this case she is showing BlackRock ($BLK).

6.) @Benzinga: Benzinga is a great source for market news. They have a large news desk dedicated to market moves. During earnings season, you can find them sharing both links and quick hit posts about earnings beats and misses. If you're looking for a consistent earnings news source, Benzinga is for you.

7.) @Estimize: Estimize is changing the way people make earnings predictions. They are the official crowdsourcing company for earnings. The Estimize account on StockTwits is a great follow if you want to join their community and follow what everyone else is saying.

8.) @TradingPlays: Sometimes, all you need is a chart. You don't care so much about an earnings report as you do about the market's reaction. In this case, TradingPlays is your go-to follow. If a stock is moving after-hours because of an earnings release, you will most likely see a chart posted from him.

9.) @CapitalMarketLabs: If you respect both fundamentals and technicals, then this account is worth investigating. Follow them and you won't miss a single balance sheet insight or technical chart before a company reports earnings.

10.) @FinancialJuice: This account is for everyone who likes global macro news. FinancialJuice breaks just about everything that's happening around the world. During earnings season, they take a unique approach and focus on both the macro and notable earnings highlights. This account is worth a follow if you trade FX, bonds, or the major indices.

11.) @FonsieTrader: Joao Afonso is an independent trader who loves markets and trading. Follow Afonso if you're looking for swing trading ideas and instant earnings analysis. You'll get both.

12.) @EarningsCast: Say you need to listen to an earnings call. And you need to listen to it right now. Well, we have a solution for you. Follow EarningsCast right now. They share audio to almost every earnings call out there and every link is on demand.

13.) @ACInvestorBlog: Antonio Costa is a technical trader with more than 18 years of trading experience. If an earnings announcement is big, he'll be there to talk about it. Sometimes he's one of the first people to provide earnings details.

14.) @silverjet: A true swing trader, SilverJet is a great follow for two reasons. First, he shares earnings reminders that include who is reporting, when, and what their EPS estimate is. Second, he keeps the community up to date on the big movers and will alert you about the companies that are making big percentage moves on earnings.

15.) @lamicabuzz: Paul La Monica is one of the best. He's been on StockTwits since 2010 and is a pioneer in the world of social media and market news. He does it all. Follow La Monica for fantastic commentary, links, ideas, and important updates related to earnings. He also writes for CNN Money and runs the #StupidStock move of the day. Click that and check it out. It's hilarious.

16.) @WSConsensus: Wall Street Consensus is a great follow during earnings season. Why? Because they do two things particularly well. And most investors and traders will find useful. One: they share earnings calendars each week. These calendars will show you who reports and what the market expects. Two: they also share essential company upgrades and downgrades. This becomes particularly useful after earnings are reported – who downgraded and upgraded who.

17.) @TheEarningsScout: You have to follow the pros. Nick Raich is one of them.

He's quickly become one of the best follows during earnings season. His data is really unique and we don't many others who have this type of analysis. Check out an example here.

18.) @OpenOutcrier: You're about to follow one of the fastest growing accounts for breaking news. We know a lot of traders who check what @OpenOutcrier is saying each day. This account has a knack for surfacing big market rumors, whether true or false, and sharing them with everyone. Additionally, if you like options, you will find this follow useful as options are one of their specialities.

19.) @TheStreet: We're all familiar with The Street and when it comes to earnings, The Street is consistent and timely. During some weeks, over one hundred companies report earnings. While it's nearly impossible to follow them all, The Street probably gets the closest to doing it. Each day you're guaranteed to get earnings news and links delivered to you.

20.) @WallStChatter: It was the summer of 2015 when WallStChatter burst onto the scene. They started sharing news, stats, and big moves around the stock market. They analyze options, new highs, new lows, and a lot more. During earnings season, give this account a follow if you're looking for quick stats about how companies are moving.

21.) @eWhispers: We highly recommend eWhispers. Give their profile a quick read on the right. You'll see what kind of information they have. They provide a high level look at earnings that you can't miss.

21.) @ThunderWicks: If you want every market headline delivered to you daily, then this is your immediate follow. Go ahead. Click the link and above and press follow. During earnings season, the ThunderWicks account is humming with timely information.

22.) @StocksEarning: Here's another great account for traders and for those who like to trade specifically on earnings releases. Before every earnings report, go check this account out for historical moves and data. They will show you how a stock has moved in the past and how that can potentially be traded.

23.) @TipRanks: An essential component to earnings season is to watch what Wall Street is saying after a company reports. Here's where TipRanks becomes one really powerful tool. They rank and track every analyst on Wall Street. That means you can see if an analyst has upgrades and downgrades that actually play out.

24.) @ep_capital: How do earnings impact the entire market? Follow Erik Paul to find out. When the S&P 500, Dow, or Nasdaq move during earnings season, Paul will point it out. He'll also show you what company may be aiding the move higher. Most importantly, he follows futures very closely and will have an update for you on that as well.

25.) @ZacksResearch: Get timely articles and shares from market professionals. Each day they are scanning, analyzing, and writing about the markets. One of their own, @TraceyRyniec, is listed above, too. She shares great charts. Zacks also has great analyst estimates and ratings. It's a comprehensive and well managed database. Follow them and check it out.

26.) @quantcha: Options traders, here's another follow just for you. Follow Quantcha for potential option trades and option statistics before and after earnings. They're constantly crunching individual stocks for unique option set-ups and probabilities.

27.) @JorelLaraKalel: Sometimes all you need is one market commentary follow that covers a little bit of everything. In this case, if you follow JorelLaraKalel you will get timely and little market snapshots about what's going on.

28.) @LiveSquawk: We love global macro follows. Get news about forex, bonds, stocks, and more. In that case, LiveSquawk is your go-to follow. They focus on events happening across the world, and it's interesting combine these insights with earnings.

29.) @WhisperNumber: One thing that's great about WhisperNumber, is how long they've been around. They started in 1998. We've been following them over the last several earnings season. It's been useful to get their Whisper Numbers delivered right to us. It looks like this when they share it.

30.) @TMXMoney: Say you're in Canada and you love StockTwits. Well, don't worry. Go follow TMXMoney right now. They focus on Canadian stocks and news. This includes their earnings. If there's anything big going on in Canada, we check this account.

31.) @EyeOnEquities: This is Darcy Keith and he's a professional markets journalist. Keith has been in the field for over 20 years. Just look at his profile on the right – it's pretty impressive. You can also follow his colleague @MichaelBabad. They both have a great taste and interest in financial markets. You'll get earnings news and links to the Globe and Mail about earnings.
